Putin seems to have understood

Welcome to today's broadcast at KTV. This time we want to have a look at Russia because different public statements of President Putin suggest that he has understood the correlation between "cultural decline" and "sexual promiscuity". Putin is "deeply convinced" that in many Western states in which ethical foundations as well as national, religious and even identities of sex are negated or relativized, the decline of the culture and national identity is underway: "In these states the question is even put, whether parties that propagate pedophilia are to be legitimized." Responding to criticism referring to the law which forbids the propaganda of homosexuality in Russia, Putin says: "We don't prohibit anything, we don't lock anyone behind bars and have – in contrast to other countries – no punishments for such relationships. Thus the homosexuals can be all the way relaxed, but they shall please leave their fingers off the children." Could it be that this is another reason for which Putin is on the hit list because he does not allow the sexualization of children? Please spread this important piece of information. A good evening to you.
