

New Minsk Agreement is already dead: Interview with Christoph Hoerstel

Only about a week ago, on February, 12, the head of government from Russia, Ukraine, France, and Germany met in the White Russian capital Minsk and agreed upon a ceasefire and to seek a peaceful resolution to the Ukrainian conflict. The separatists, too, gave their agreement. Nobody dared to speak of a big success, though, for of course the practical application of the agreement is doubted everywhere. Even the motivation of the negotiating partners was openly questioned.

Good evening, dear viewers here on klagemauer.tv, welcome from studio Dresden! Only about a week ago, on February, 12, the head of government from Russia, Ukraine, France, and Germany met in the White Russian capital Minsk and agreed upon a ceasefire and to seek a peaceful resolution to the Ukrainian conflict. The separatists, too, gave their agreement. Nobody dared to speak of a big success, though, for of course the practical application of the agreement is doubted everywhere. Even the motivation of the negotiating partners was openly questioned. Today my colleague conducted a telephone-interview with Christoph Hörstel, governmental advisor, publicist and former long-term correspondent for the German public broadcasting service "ARD", in Afghanistan amongst other countries. Listen to his evaluation of the current situation in Ukraine.

Dear viewers, spread this evaluation. Contribute so that what still can be hindered will be hindered through as many people as possible. Have a good evening, see you tomorrow, same time same place.
