This year the theme was: „Societies between war and peace: Overcoming the logic of the conflicts in a world of tomorrow.” The Russian President Putin held an impressive and groundbreaking speech before the assembled audience which is worth looking into more closely. The analytical, sensitive and constructive basis tenor of Putin's speech which once more stands in total contrast to the image, which Western politicians and the media are trying to give the Russian president with great emphasis – namely the image of an incorrigible ignorant person and unpredictable outsider. Putin spoke about war and peace in the human history, global imbalance of powers, origin and goal of the current information war as well as of the wars and refugee crisis of the Middle East and of the global terrorism. He showed ways how the concerned regions could live in peace and stability again. Have a look at Putin's speech yourself which takes approximately half an hour!
